

Infused Air Engine

by Flock Fighters USA

Infused Air, I.A., is a technology invented for aerosol bird aversion. The active ingredient of RejeX-it Fog Force, Methyl Anthranilate, MA, is "infused" into an air stream. The permeated air stream is introduced to the site and the target birds through an open throat, or installed piping. The aerosol is delivered at ambient temperatures and low positive pressure.

The pipe is installed to specification at the target site and release holes are drilled into the pipe to release the MA aerosol. The dosage can be localized or blanketed for the coverage needed. This delivery method allows cost-effective continuous, timed aerosol application for critical areas, where bird pressure is greatest.

The aerosol even affects the birds in flight before they land and become focused on the location. Whether used in continuous operations or scheduled periodic applications, IA is the tool of choice for chemical bird aversion. M.A. aerosols delivered through pipe: direct, focused, clean, marginal smell and no residuals.

Now, sites with bird focus and high "people-pressure" can be protected with MA aerosols with minimum smell to humans. If birds are above the heads of humans, the birds can be expelled without people knowing any control measures are being employed.

The physical properties of the MA treated air flow do not produce a residue on buildings or landscapes.

Operating on 110VAC and available with timer controls, this machine provides stand alone, automatic control.

I.A. Engine running without manifold connections or pressure; note the wisps of "smoke" impregnated with MA.

I.A. Engine running under pressure without manifold connections, note air flow and the "dilution" of MA with air flow. Attach a pipe to the outlet and channel the bird repellent to the target area, which is then spread through the space.
